Pluto aspects and potential impact:

Extra: Uranus Conjunct North Node

The North Node is a part of the Lunar Nodes, which are spiritual/karmic in nature, and there are two that oppose one another, a North Node and a South Node. The South Node is the past, crutches, and baggage, while the North Node is the future, your potential, purpose, and fulfillment.

Uranus is the planet of the future, of change, of the sudden and unexpected, of the unconventional and unusual. Conjunctions mean they are aligned. Uranus conjuncts the North Node on July 31st at 18 degrees Taurus (for those who want the reference, the last time they conjuncted was March 2007 in Pisces).

This is a huge push into the future, and we may experience unexpected developments that challenge us to go outside of our comfort zones. It can be uncomfortable, but help us make progress with our dreams for the future.

In Taurus, this may change the way things have been, upset stability and security, but in a beneficial way if we go with it instead of fighting it. Take control of change and try to make it on your own terms, and this can help you feel more confident and in control.

Which changes can you start on your own?
Which dreams do you want to give more attention to? How can you stay flexible with unexpected developments?
